Parking Lot L is located two blocks south of U.S. Cellular Field in Chicago, Illinois. Rose Paving, as the prime contractor, was responsible for complete site demolition, excavation and disposal of contaminated soils, stone grading and the installation of concrete curb and sidewalk and permeable brick pavement. Specifically, the pavement cross section was designed and built to store peak flow run off equating to 73,100 cubic feet or just over 0.50 million gallons. Design elements also included the use of variable colored pavers to enhance the decorative and functional nature of the lot. The parking lot encompasses an area of 265,000 square feet and was completed several days prior to the scheduled deadline.
